Aims and objectives: to analyse the contemporary migration processes in the world, theories of migration, to know and apply international refugee and asylum, law of the EU concerning asylum and migration, to analyse immigration and asylum policies in the EU, legal status of refugees and persons who demands additional protection in Ukraine, to know main issues concerning cooperation with EU concerning migration and asylum, to determinate the connection between migration and crime rate.

Description: The course deals with contemporary problems of migration and asylum in Ukraine and the EU. The main focus is made on the study of international law, EU law and Ukraine's law concerning migration, refugees, their legal status, crime rate caused by migration. A goal of this course is to explore the factors influencing the decisions of labor migrants to return, to examine and assess the role of government policy and reintegration packages in encouraging return, to develop a set of economic, organizational and financial measures aimed at voluntary return of the Ukrainian labor migrants and their successful reintegration into the local economy. The composition and impact of these flows vary greatly from country to country and from region to region. National immigration policy follows the path and draws upon these flows... while a final agreement for a common immigration policy does not exist so far. Special attention is paid to the problems of current migration problems in the EU and issues of internally displaced persons in Ukraine.
